LEAN 'N MEAN.

There are two kinds of places where you can go for fresh, lean-quality beef. The fancy restaurants, with their fancy prices. Or Burgerville.

Unlike other fast food places, we buy our beef fresh. From one of the city's finest suppliers. The Fulton Provision Company. Their beef is all-American. Not imported from who knows where. And that makes for a difference you can taste.

Come to Burgerville. You just can't beat the quality. Or the price.

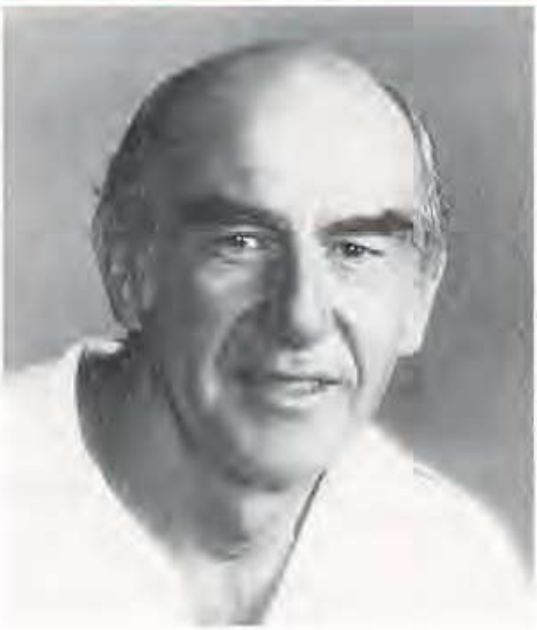
JACK RAMSAY



When the Trail Blazers got off to a 7-19 start last season, there were some rumblings—NOT coming from the club's offices — that Jack Ramsay might be fired as head coach.

The person who wrapped up the truth more succinctly than anyone else was, of all people, George Raveling, basketball coach at Washington State University.

Said Raveling in a weekly column with a large circulation in Washington, "The craziest rumor I have heard in years is the one that says the Portland Trail Blazers will fire Jack Ramsay."

Jack has forgotten more basketball than half the country's coaches will ever know," wrote Raveling. "I would have given my right arm to train under him."

So much for rumors.

Portland went on to win 38 of the team's final 56 games and make the playofs with a 45-37 record.

And Ramsay, in March of 1981, signed a new three-year contract that includes an additional two option years, meaning Portland has the right to keep him during that period.

At the time of the signing, Ramsay said, "Probably the highlight of my professional life has been the early success we attained."

"I would like to get back to what we had," he added. "Hopefully, the next three years will enable us to get there."

The "early success" was the world's championship in 1977 and the best regular-season record in the National Basketball Association in 1977-78.

It's little wonder that the Blazers wanted to retain Ramsay, who is starting his sixth season with Portland.

He is the third-winningest coach in the NBA and one of only five coaches in league history to win 500 or more games.

Red Auerbach leads with 938, Red Holzman is second with 663, Ramsay is third with 567, Gene Shue is fourth with 565 and Dick Motta is fifth with 556.

In his five seasons with the Trail Blazers, Ramsay's clubs have won 234 and lost 175 for a winning percentage of 57 per cent.

Ramsay is on still another string.

In his last eight seasons — five with Portland and three with Buffalo — Ramsay's teams have won 371 and lost 284.

That's the best coaching record in the NBA over that stretch.

In 13 NBA seasons — four with Philadelphia, four with Buffalo and five with Portland — Ramsay's teams have won 567 and lost 499.

Impressive is that Portland has made the playoffs in all five of the Ramsay years in the Rose City.

Only three other NBA teams — Philadelphia, Los Angeles and San Antonio — have made the playoffs the last five years in a row.

Counting his final years at Buffalo, Ramsay-coached teams have made the playoffs the last eight years in a row.

No other NBA coach can make that statement.

Ramsay joined the professional ranks after 11 seasons as coach of St. Joseph's College in Philadelphia. He won 76.5 per cent of his games with a record of 234 victories and 72 defeats.

A 1949 graduate of St. Joseph's, where he was team captain as a senior, Ramsay coached his alma mater from 1955-56 through 1965-66. In college, he led his club to 10 major post-season tournaments.

Ramsay's philosophy of coaching was explained well in an article by Jonathan Parry Nicholas in This Week.

Said Ramsay, "I'm mostly concerned with a player's performance on the court. That's his primary obligation to me, that he's ready to play his best basketball whenever we go out there for a game."

"But I'm also concerned about him as a person," Ramsay added. "This is a very select group of athletes we have here. There are less than 250 players in the world each year who get to play at this level.

"Their average period of play in the NBA is just about three years. Those can be very productive years and may provide the basis for a very satisfying life."

"I don't want to see people blowing that chance," Ramsay concluded. "It comes only once and it comes to a very few people. I want to make sure that they make the most out it. I have an obligation to do that for them."

Ramsay is married and he and his wife, Jean, have three daughters and two sons.

HARRY GLICKMAN

The Portland Trail Blazers will open their 1981-82 campaign looking back on 186 consecutive sellouts in regular-season and playoff games.

Or perhaps that should be phrased looking ahead to and hoping for more.

At any rate, it's a tribute to the man most responsible for bringing the first major league professional sport to Portland, to Harry Glickman, executive vice president.

It was in the fall of 1970 when the Trail Blazers first took the court for NBA action.

And that was when a Sports Illustrated reporter asked Glickman at a luncheon, "What do you think you know about basketball?"

"I don't think I know anything about basketball," said Glickman. "I think I know how to sell tickets, to put people in seats."

That he has done!

Glickman actually started looking for an NBA team in Portland in the 1950s.

The prospects were not bright at the time and Glickman, instead, wound up organizing the Portland Buckaroos of the old Western Hockey League.

The Buckaroos were a smash hit, both on the ice and at the box office.

In the decade of the '60s, the Buckaroos finished first seven times and second twice in one nine-season stretch.

And they smashed every attendance record in professional hockey outside the then tightly-knit six-team National Hockey League.

But Glickman never forgot about the NBA.

In January of 1970 he went to league meetings in Philadelphia with backing for a franchise.

But he found the ground rules had changed and the ante had been increased.

And he came back to Portland empty-handed.

But a month later, with new financial backing, the Portland franchise was born at a meeting in Los Angeles.

Glickman's background is all Oregon.

He was born in Portland and attended Lincoln High School where he played varsity basketball. If pressed, he will remind you that in one game he hit on all five shots from the floor.

Glickman was graduated in 1948 from University of Oregon, where he served as the school's publicity director in the Cotton Bowl days of Norm Van Brocklin, still one of Glickman's close friends.

Glickman first tried to be a sports writer. But there were no openings in Portland.

He moved into promotion, chiefly in boxing and professional football and in such sidelines as the Harlem Globetrotters.

In the 1950s and '60s, Glickman made Portland the professional football capital of the nation — outside, of course, National Football League cities.

Exhibitions in Portland drew an average of better than 25,000 a game in an era when games in other cities frequently were in the 5,000 to 10,000 range.

The Globetrotters almost always sold out in Portland.

And Glickman was active in post-World War II boxing when virtually every all-time attendance and gate record was set in the state of Oregon.

Glickman and his wife, Joanne, have two daughters, Lynn and Jennifer, and a son, Marshall.

STU INMAN

In only one season has the National Basketball Association draft failed to produce a player who made it with the Portland Trail Blazers.

The lone exception was 1973, the year of a major trade of draft choices to Cleveland for veterans Rick Roberson and John Johnson.

Four draft choices survived with the Blazers in both 1970 and 1971 and five in 1972. There were three in 1974, two in 1975, two in 1976, two in 1977, three in 1978, one in 1979 and two in 1980.

It all speaks highly of the homework done by Stuart K. Inman, Portland's General Manager.

A man who is responsible for the draft of both Bob Gross and Lionel Hollins in one season and for Mychal Thompson, Ron Brewer and Clemon Johnson in another season goes to the head of the class.

It is not surprising that the training camp roster of the 1981-82 Trail Blazers included 12 draft choices.

Or that the world champions of 1977 had eight draft choices, two free agents, one player acquired in a trade and only one outright purchase.

Inman, who grew up in the Bay Area and never lets you forget it (sorry, Stu), is a Trail Blazer original.

And almost by accident.

When an NBA franchise was granted to Portland in February of 1970, there were only a couple of months to put together the club's first draft and the college season was almost over.

Inman came highly recommended and signed on, really as a temporary scout.

Inman didn't get much sleep for a few months but his first draft choice was Geoff Petrie of Princeton who would up sharing Rookie of the Year honors in the NBA with Dave Cowens from Boston.

Two years later Inman was a vice president of the club. And he's still around.

Inman is a 1950 graduate of San Jose State, where he played a bit of basketball as a 6-5 center. In fact, he's still the school's all-time scoring champion—a remarkable accomplishment considering that scores were much lower in that era.

The Spartans were pretty tough, too, in Inman's undergraduate days, posting records of 19-9, 23-9, 22-12 and 21-7 for an overall record of 85-37.

Inman is a member of the school's Sports Hall of Fame.

But it should not be overlooked that Inman still holds the all-time San Jose State record for personal fouls in a career.

And he's an old hand at international clinics, having conducted them virtually all over the world.

Inman and his wife, Elinor, have four daughters — Nancy, Sandy, Janice and Carol — and a son, David.

BUCKY BUCKWALTER

Morris (Bucky) Buckwalter returns to the Portland Trail Blazers as an assistant coach for the third straight season.

But his primary duties will vary this time around.

Buckwalter will concentrate much more on scouting of both professional and college teams than on assisting Jack Ramsay at the bench during games.

"I think we are trying to put Bucky in the best of all worlds for him and ourselves in that he will continue to teach and assist Jack with team responsibilities through most of November," said Portland General Manager Stu Inman.

"I am sure that he will be involved with a great deal of NBA scouting in November," said Inman. "From there on he will work mostly with college scouting, where he is extremely qualified."

"I personally believe," said Inman, "that Bucky is one of the best evaluators of talent anywhere in the NBA."

"I am really excited about him returning to me for at least half the season," said Inman. "But we do not minimize his continued contributions to the coaching areas.

"Bucky will make a serious contribution to the coaching and a greater contribution to NBA scouting, which is of much greater importance these days. We really are broadening Bucky's base."

Buckwalter's background includes extensive experience in both scouting and coaching.

He scouted for the Trail Blazers for three seasons before coaching Fresno in the Western Basketball Association for a year before joining Portland as an assistant.

In the professional ranks, Buckwalter joined the Seattle SuperSonics as an assistant coach in 1972-73. When Tom Nissalke was fired in January of 1973, Buckwalter took over as head coach for the rest of the season.

In 1973-74 he was assistant general manager to Bill Russell with the SuperSonics.

JIMMY LYNAM

A new assistant coach of the Portland Trail Blazers is bouncy Jimmy Lynam, a 39-year-old explosion of energy with one of the quickest smiles in basketball.

Lynam joins the Blazers after three seasons as head coach at St. Joseph's where he posted a 65-28 record and shocked the hoop world last spring by upsetting top-ranked DePaul, 49-48, in the NCAA championship tournament.

He previously had coached two seasons at Fairfield University where he won 23 and lost 29 and at American University where his record was 70-61.

Lynam contines the trend toward the day when all NBA coaches will be able to say, "I played at St. Joseph's for Jack Ramsay."

Paul Westhead, coach of the Los Angeles Lakers, is a member of the club. So is Jack McKinney, coach of the Indiana Pacers. And Lynam is no exception.

He played guard for Ramsay from 1962 through 1964, scoring 1,012 points and twice being voted St. Joseph's most valuable player. In 1962-63 he shared the Most Valuable Player award in Philadelphia's Big Five and he is a member of the Hall of Fame both at St. Joseph's and in the Big Five.

Lynam, who taught calculus at St. Joseph's, was a member of Jack Ramsay's team that advanced to the final four of the NCAA championships before losing to an Ohio State team that included such future NBA stars as John Havlicek, Jerry Lucas and Larry Siegfreid.

In accepting the position with the Blazers, Lynam said, "I felt I could not pass up the opportunity to coach under Jack Ramsay in the NBA. The biggest thing was timing. This seemed like the right time to take advantage of an opportunity. You never know how often chances like this will come along."

"I've always been a big fan of the pro game," says Lynam, "and now I can answer questions about my own latent interest in coaching there. Now I can watch the cream of the crop because, in the NBA, you're talking about the best basketball there is."

In considering the decision, Lynam noted that "Jack McKinney says Portland is the nicest place he ever lived and, according to Jack Ramsay, there's tremendous enthusiasm for basketball. It's funny but even though I never had been there, I felt I knew exactly what Portland was like."

Of his new assistant, Coach Ramsay says, "My association with Jim Lynam goes back a long way, at the levels of player, person, coach and friend. He greatly impressed me with the work he did, especially over the last two years and there was never any question about his ability as a teacher."

Ramsay added, "As a player, Jimmy Lynam was a coach on the court. He was extremely competitive, a great thinker and doer. As a coach, he has carried these same traits with him. He is an excellent teacher of fundamentals."

RON CULP

Ron Culp is beginning his 12th season as a trainer in the National Basketball Association and his 8th with the Portland Trail Blazers.

This puts him in pretty select company.

Only five other trainers have been in the NBA since the fall of 1970 when Culp broke into the professional ranks with the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Joe O'Toole still is with Atlanta, Dick D'Olivia with Golden State, Al Domenico with Philadelphia and Joe Proski with Phoenix.

Jack Curran was with the Seattle SuperSonics in 1970-71 and now is with the Los Angeles Lakers.

Culp joined the professional ranks with sound credentials.

A 1968 graduate of Bowling Green State University in Ohio, he earned a master's degree at the same school and has done graduate work on physical therapy at Case Western Reserve University.

Before joining the Cavaliers, he was head trainer at Baldwin-Wallace College in Ohio. And while in Cleveland, he also was trainer for the World Tennis team, the Cleveland Nets.

"As far back as junior high school," he says, "I was taking courses that would lead me to being a trainer."

"I did the same thing all through high school and college," he adds.

Last summer, as soon as the Trail Blazers' season had ended, Culp became trainer for the Portland Timbers of the North American Soccer League, a team for which he had worked earlier for two and one-half seasons.

Culp, who in 12 seasons has flown an estimated 1.2 million miles and who is a living hotel directory, says the greatest challenge of his job is "trying to anticipate what could happen."

"You do everything possible to prevent an ankle injury or a knee injury," he says, "then the player comes up with a shoulder separation."

And Culp has worked with as many injuries as any trainer in the league, especially during the 1979-80 season when Portland players missed 311 games with injuries, quite possibly an all-time National Basketball Association record.

But Culp loves his job.

"I know it sounds corny," he says, "but I just love everything about it. I love the travel and I love working with the guys."

JON SPOELSTRA

Vice President of Marketing of the Blazers is Jon Spoelstra. Since joining the club three years ago, the Blazers have brought both radio and television in-house, have developed a one-hour Blazer Sports Talk Show preceding each radio game broadcast, have developed summertime Blazer TV Specials and a "Great Blazer Moments" series on television. The Blazers sell the advertising and handle production for these shows. Besides Blazer radio and television, Spoelstra's responsibilities include advertising and marketing of closed circuit productions. He is a University of Notre Dame graduate. He and his wife, Lisa, have a daughter, Monica, and son, Erik.

BERLYN HODGES

Marketing Manager of the Portland Trail Blazers for the second straight season is Berlyn Hodges, an original with the club. He formerly was administratiave assistant to Executive Vice President Harry Glickman. Hodges is active in advertiser-account management and is active in coordinating advertiser activities on television, in promotions and in merchandising. Hodges formerly was vice president of the Portland Buckaroos hockey team and for 11 seasons was the Buckaroos' trainer. He was a professional baseball pitcher and in his leisure hours still is a crack golfer.

WALLY SCALES

Director of promotions with the Portland Trail Blazers is Wally Scales, who is in his 10th season with the club. Scales also assists in marketing and sales. Scales is responsible for halftime entertainment and arranges promotions which have captured the fancy of fans. He is in constant demand as a speaker at service clubs and other organizations. Scales was an all-city guard in his native St. Louis and attended Lincoln University and Citrus College, the latter after an air force hitch. Scales and his wife, Brenda, have two children, Tamara and J.R.

PHILIPPE LAVIE

Philippe Lavie, account executive, joined the Trail Blazers in September of 1980. His responsibilities lie in selling radio, television and Identity packages to advertisers. He participates in the general activities of the Marketing Department and has a major responsibility of marketing the Paramount Theater, where all home games are shown on closed circuit. Philippe is French born and has concluded his Master in Business Administration and Management in France.

BILLY RAY BATES

Billy Ray Bates exploded on Portland's basketball scene from the Continental League is the late stages of the 1979-80 season and ever since has kept Memorial Coliseum fans in a frenzy with his enthusiasm and spectacular dunks.

Now he's armed with a new five-year contract, signed in May of 1981, and the future of the 6-4 guard from Kentucky State appears unlimited.

Consider his 1980-81 season, his first full one in the NBA!

He was Portland's fourth-highest scorer with a 13.8 average, even though he started only four times . . . that average jumped to 16.5 in his last 32 games . . . for the season he shot a solid .487 but in his last 31 games he hit on 218 of 406 for .537 marksmanship . . . in his last 25 games at the foul line, he shot .881 and raised his season average to .854, the 10th-best record in the NBA . . . he scored Portland's single-game high of 40 points against San Diego . . .

Then there are the playoffs. Are there ever the playoffs!

In 1980, Bates led Portland in playoff scoring with 25 points a game. Last spring he led the Blazers with 28.3 points a contest.

In six playoff games in two years, he has averaged 26.7 points a game while shooting .545 from the floor and .806 from the foul line.

Unofficially, only five players in NBA history have higher playoff scoring averages—Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Bob McAdoo, George Gervin, Jerry West and Elgin Baylor.

It's unofficial, of course, because it takes 25 games played for official ranking.

"I've still got a lot to learn," says Bates, "but I'm willing to learn and work hard to do it."

"I'm not getting away from dunking," he says, "but I have to concentrate on other things, like playing better defense. Playing defense in this league is the hardest thing."

"I'm a loose player," Bates adds, "and I try to keep everybody happy. Most everybody on the team likes me, I think. We're like brothers, you know, always crackin' on each other."

Coach Jack Ramsay says of Bates, "He is always going to need a lot of attention. Billy will be a continuous process. But he is such a breath of fresh air you can't help but like him. He is such a resilient personality."

General Manager Stu Inman says, "Last season we had to view Billy as a rookie in every way to keep it in perspective. I think as a rookie he developed a real consistency to his play. He has proved to be a good playoff player for us for two years. We were disappointed in what we did collectively in the playoffs, but you can't be disappointed in how Billy performed."

"I don't think Billy has arrived fully as a player yet," Inman adds. "But he's moving toward that conclusion. I think he can have a long and successful career in the NBA and I think that's what Billy wants."

BOB GROSS

Bob Gross, only surviving member of Portland's 1977 world champions, came back last season after two injury-plagued campaigns to be the only Trail Blazer to play in all 82 regular-season games.

And some familiar figures returned to the record books for the 6-6 forward from Long Beach State.

He shot .526 from the floor, his best mark since '77-'78 when he hit at a .529 clip that at the time was a team record.

Further, as Portland roared back from a bad start to make the playoffs, Gross got hotter. In his final 43 games, he was .570 from the field on 138 of 242 and that record over a full season would have placed him in the National Basketball Association's top ten in shooting accuracy.

Gross was .850 from the foul line, second-best record of his career, and he ranked just outside the NBA's top 10.

He earned 251 assists, second best-record of his six-season career. He hauled in 328 rebounds, his highest total since 1977-78. And he had a career high of 67 blocked shots.

Yet Gross last season found himself in a relatively new role, often coming off the bench.

"As far as my role is now," he said, "well I have to look for my opportunities a lot more than in the past. I have to try a few more jump shots, when in the past I would run the offense through. It's hard for me. But if I go about it in practice every day, it makes it easier for me."

As Gross points out, "With me in the game, we may not be as big, but I think we'll get a lot more fast breaks and better passing. By making a lineup change, you're just giving up one thing to get something else."

Gross is optimistic.

"I think I can come all the way back to the player I was, once I start feeling totally comfortable with myself again," he says.

Some notes on Gross . . .

In Portland last summer, he won the first NBA Players' Golf Classic with a 74 . . . his playoff record is remarkable, with .578 career shooting from the field, .851 from the foul line and 12.3 points a game . . . Gross last season scored in double figures against four opponents with a high average of 12.0 against Milwaukee . . . he was perfect at the foul line against seven opponents . . . he shot .818 from the field against Washington, .750 against both Indiana and Philadelphia . . . .679 against Dallas, .611 against Milwaukee, .606 against Los Angeles and was in the .500s against six other foes . . . his worst mark was 1-10 for .100 against New Jersey . . .

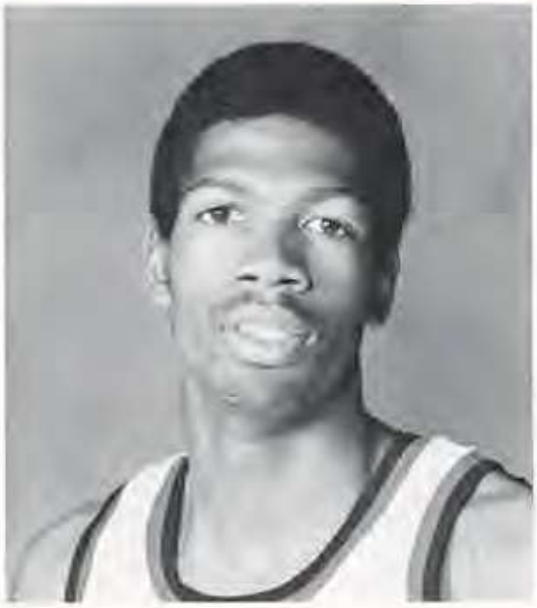
MICHAEL HARPER



Michael Harper's rookie statistics with the Portland Trail Blazers are not going to overwhelm anyone.

In 55 games, the 6-10 center-forward from North Park College in Chicago played just 461 minutes, shot .412 from the field and .435 from the foul line. He had 93 rebounds and scored 149 points for a 2.7 average.

But there was improvement in Harper's shooting late in the season. In his final 22 games, he hit on 32 of 61 from the floor for .525 marksmanship.

Further, Harper holds a singular distinction. He is the only Trail Blazer in history who never has missed a shot in the playoffs. So what if he was 1-for-1 from the field and 1-for-1 from the foul line in six minutes of action in a single game.

In a dream world, Harper might hope for a professional repeat of the start of his college career. As a freshman, he averaged 1.1 points a game. The next season he boomed to almost a 20-point average.

It is not likely to happen in the NBA.

But Portland General Manager Stu Inman is optimistic.

"Michael might not be getting that much playing time right now," said Inman late last season. "But eventually he'll become one of the top forwards in the league."

Harper, himself, says, "I made the team. I didn't get cut. I didn't get fired as they say. I wasn't really sure the whole year. I always felt better when I was really helping. Sometimes I felt sitting on the bench I wasn't really doing my part.

"But everything went the way that was beneficial to me. I don't think my playing would have helped the team any more. We had an excellent season. My job was to keep the team prepared to play and be prepared whenever I went out there."

"Last year," says Harper, "the fans didn't expect anything. They're not aware of my talent."

Harper adds, "I never expected to be a star the first year I was in the NBA. But let's face it. Things couldn't be much worse. My career can only improve. What I've got to do is to come back with a brand new game. Every year you have to add something."

"I think I could be something," says Harper, "that Portland could work on now and get excellent results from later."

Asked about his continuous smile, Harper said, "This is a smiling organization—players, coaches, trainers, radio announcers."

Some Harper notes . . . in college Harper had a career shooting mark of .573 and led North Park to three straight Division III NCAA championships . . . he posted his best scoring average last season against Denver (6.4) and Boston (6.0) . . . he shot best against San Diego (.579) and Denver (.524) . . .

Harper's favorite road city is his home town of Chicago . . . he rates Dave Corzine, Jim Paxson and Mickey Johnson as the most under-rated players in the NBA . . . his favorite movie is Superman and his favorite television shows are Love Boat and General Hospital . . . his favorite actor is Redd Foxx and his favorite actress Farrah Fawcett . . . his favorite comedian is Richard Pryor and his favorite musical group is Earth, Wind and Fire . . . his favorite road arena is the Kingdome in Seattle . . .

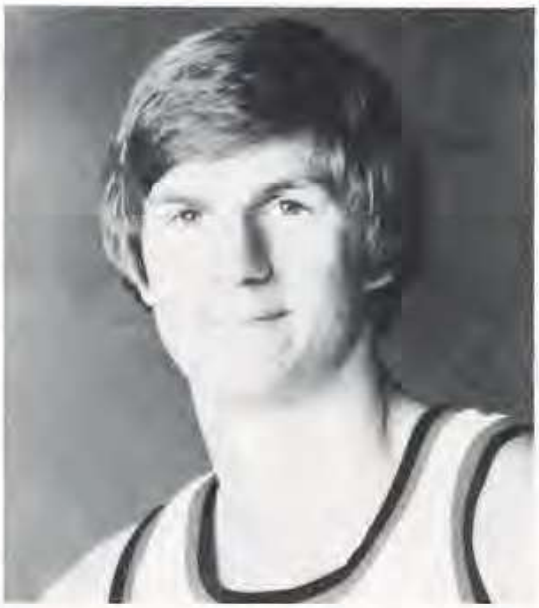
KEVIN KUNNERT



The injury jinx continued in 1980-81 for Kevin Kunnert.

Here is a 6-11 center from University of Iowa who joined the Portland Trail Blazers in the fall of 1979 as a part of the Bill Walton compensation.

In four previous seasons, three with Houston and the last one with San Diego, he had missed only six games. Check the totals — 80 games, 81 games and 80 games with Houston and 81 with San Diego.

In his first season with Portland, Kunnert missed 64 games with a torn anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee.

Last season, he played only 55 games, seldom in top physical condition, because of torn cartilage in his left knee.

Kunnert is not giving up and if healthy could prove a key as a backup center for the 1981-82 Trail Blazers.

"I've had an injury like this before and I've come back, so I'm not worried," said Kunnert last season. "It just needs to be rested."

It was Blazer Coach Jack Ramsay who perhaps put it best about two years ago after Kunnert was hurt in Phoenix and missed the rest of the season.

"Hey," said Ramsay, "we were on top of our division and had one of the best records in the NBA when Kevin was hurt."

"That," said Ramsay, "should tell you something."

Kunnert's problems have been compounded by a lack of playing experience in the Portland system.

"What makes this doubly tough for me," he says, "is that I've had to adjust to the high post. I've always played with my back to the basket. Now I'm playing an all-new position."

Kunnert adds, "I just want to be pleased with myself, with my game. I couldn't play basketball just 50 per cent. I've got too much pride for that."

Despite injury problems, there were encouraging signs last season.

Kunnert shot .469 from the floor, his best record in four seasons. (His career mark is .476) . . . he played 162 minutes in his last nine regular-season games and responded with 60 rebounds . . . that would be 15 rebounds a game for a 40.5 minute contest . . .

And in the 1981 playoffs, Kunnert saw 43 minutes of action, shot .500 from the field, hauled in 9 rebounds and scored 11 points.

CALVIN NATT

If you look only at the record book, Calvin Natt's sophomore NBA season with the Portland Trail Blazers was disappointing.

Oh, there were bright spots for the 6-6 forward from Northeast Louisiana, No. 1 draft choice of the New Jersey Nets in 1970.

He shot .498 from the field, up from .479 as a rookie. And in his final 12 games of the regular campaign, Natt hit on 58 of 96 from the field for .604 marksmanship.

This was the period when Portland battled into the playoffs.

But Natt's scoring average dropped from 19.9 points a game his first season (20.4 in 25 contests with Portland after the Maurice Lucas trade) to 13.4.

His field goal totals dropped from 622 to 395, his field goals attempted from 1298 to 784, his rebounds from 691 to 431 and his steals from 102 to 73.

But Natt's two-year pro figures still are impressive — 15.7 points and 6.9 rebounds a game, .488 shooting from the field.

Says General Manager Stu Inman of the Blazers, "The thing that sustains Calvin Natts is that they are battlers by nature. He is finding out now that he is not all things to all people. That's good. It's very important for him to see how economy of play can work in the NBA."

And Inman adds, "When Calvin first came here, I thought he was a very plastic player. He acted like he was out of where he should have been. That first trade was shattering. It can happen to anybody. It's like the rejection of a girl friend."

"But now he is shooting very much within himself," says Inman. "He has had to reassess where he is. And he has accepted that graciously."

Natt, himself, says, "I'm a role player now, I guess. I am sacrificing some of my game. I have to because that's my job. I may not like it. I guess I don't like it. But it's my job now."

"I am not going to raise hell about it," says Natt. "I'm not a griper by nature. I'll just do what they tell me to do to help to win. If Jack Ramsay tells me to jump, I'll jump. I'm not taking the jump shot like I used to. What most people don't realize is that's what I was in college and at New Jersey. I was a jump shooter from the outside."

Some notes on Natt . . . Natt last season averaged 22.8 points a game against Denver, 22 against Philadelphia and 21 against New York . . . he scored in double figures against 17 of 22 opponents . . . lowest scoring averages were 4 points a game against both Washington and Milwaukee . . . he shot .698 against Denver, .579 against Phoenix, .565 against Kansas City, .522 against San Antonio, .516 against Philadelphia, .508 against Dallas and .500 against five other foes . . . low points were .214 shooting against Milwaukee, .375 against Boston and .383 against Utah . . .

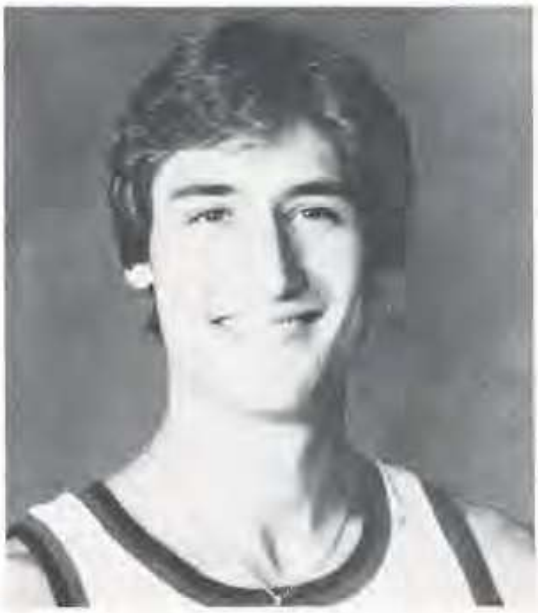
JIM PAXSON



What a sophomore season for Jim Paxson, 6-6 guard with the Portland Trail Blazers.

The Dayton product, drafted in the first round in 1980, led Portland in scoring with 17.1 points a game, up from 6.2 as a rookie.

He scored 696 points in his last 37 games for an 18.8 average . . . he shot .536 from the floor, up from .411 as a rookie and in his last 30 games fired at a .568 clip . . . he led Portland in steals with 140 and finished just outside the Top Ten in the NBA . . . he was second on Portland in assists with 299 . . . he scored in double figures in 73 of 79 games played, best record on the club.

It's little wonder that Portland was hurt badly when Paxson was limited to just 4 minutes of playing time in the playoffs because of a right foot injury.

Why the improvement?

"I had trouble adjusting the first year," he says, "and if I had a bad game I'd let it bother me and remain on my mind. I just didn't make the adjustment. I was coming off the bench for the first time. That's not easy when you've always been the big scorer."

Paxson credits his wife of 1980, Kris, for improvement.

"She's not really a basketball fan, except for me," he says, "and I think that's good. Now when I go home I don't feel any pressure on me. I know there will be a tomorrow. Sometimes the first year I wasn't sure if there would be a tomorrow."

Of the 1980-81 season, Portland Coach Jack Ramsay says of Paxson, "Jim played with a positive, take-charge style that he didn't display in his first season."

"I think the biggest thing is the confidence factor for Jimmy," says the coach. "He now feels good about his ability to play in the NBA. He's not so concerned about lacking perfection each game. Maybe he was too critical of himself the first year. He was more concerned with passing than shooting."

Some notes about Paxson . . . his father, Jim Sr., played with Minneapolis and the Cincinnati Royals in the NBA seasons of 1956-57 and 1957-58 . . . Paxson last season averaged in double figures in scoring against all 22 opponents and scored 20 or more points at least once against 16 of them . . . his best average was 23.5 against Atlanta and his worst 13.0 against Philadelphia . . . Paxson shot .700 against Atlanta, .682 against Chicago, .641 against Denver and .607 against New York . . . he was .586 against Seattle, .578 against Dallas, .583 against Detroit, .578 against San Diego, .545 against Philadelphia and .539 against Golden State . . . his low points in shooting were .387 against New Jersey and .417 against Boston.

Some personal notes . . . his favorite road city is San Diego because of the sunshine . . . his favorite road restaurant is McCormick's in Seattle . . . Paxson names Robert Parish, Mike Newlin and Alex English as the three most under-rated players in the NBA . . . his favorite movies are "10," "Animal House" and "Caddyshack" . . . his favorite television shows are Sixty Minutes and Mash . . .

KELVIN RANSEY

Kelvin Ransey, 6-2 guard from Ohio State and a first-round draft choice in 1980, did not sign a contract with Portland's Trail Blazers until the eve of the season opener.

And when he reported he was overweight to the point that teammates dubbed him "Mrs. Butterworth" after the famous syrup.

But did Ransey ever jell. He finished with 555 assists in 80 games to fracture Portland's old all-time record of 440 set by Sidney Wicks in 1972-73 and he tied for seventh in the NBA with a 6.9 average.

And there was improvement as the weight dropped. In his last 25 games, he had 219 assists for an 8.8 average and led the Blazers in assists in 50 of the last 58 games.

For the season, Ransey was Portland's No. 3 scorer with 15.2 points a game. Again, there was dramatic improvement. He averaged 6.8 points a contest in his first 25 games. In his last 55, he scored in double figures 50 times and scored 1025 points for an 18.6 average. That average jumped to 21.8 in his last five games.

In March of 1981, when he was in double figures in assists six times and twice scored more than 30 points, Ransey was named the NBA-Pepsi Player of the Month, the only rookie honored all season.

When it was over, he was named to the All-Rookie team and missed being Rookie of the Year by a single vote.

Of Ransey, Portland Coach Jack Ramsay said, "Our biggest need in the draft was for a ball-handling guard, a lead guard who could direct the offense, penetrate, pass and hit the open shot. Kelvin has provided these things. He has shown remarkable poise and is an excellent pressure player. His defense has improved dramatically since the beginning of the season."

And Ramsay adds, "I equate what Kelvin has done for us with the way Phil Ford has played for Kansas City."

General Manager Stu Inman puts it this way:

"We felt Kelvin was the best lead guard out of the college draft. When you talk about a lead guard, you're talking about additional responsibility than the other four players have. I marvel at his ability to pass and shoot the ball in traffic. He does that as well as anybody."

Ransey, himself, says, "I think I came to Portland at exactly the right time. The Blazers needed someone who could bring the ball up court, and I feel like I'm improving along with the rest of the team."

And Ransey adds, "I played better than I expected to. I didn't expect to score as well as I did, and I didn't know how well I'd be able to make the adjustment to the pros."

Some Ransey notes . . . in the playoffs, Ransey averaged 16.3 points and 8.3 assists a game . . . during the regular season he averaged 20 or more points against five opponents, was in double figures against all except five with a low of 4.5 against Milwaukee . . . he shot .500 or better against seven foes . . . his best assist averages were 10.5 against Chicago, 10.0 against Indiana, 9.5 against Detroit, 8.5 against Philadelphia and 8.0 against both Los Angeles and New York . . . Ransey names Bob Lanier, Norm Nixon and Kermit Washington as the three most under-rated players in the NBA . . . his favorite TV show is Dallas, and his favorite comedian is Richard Pryor . . .

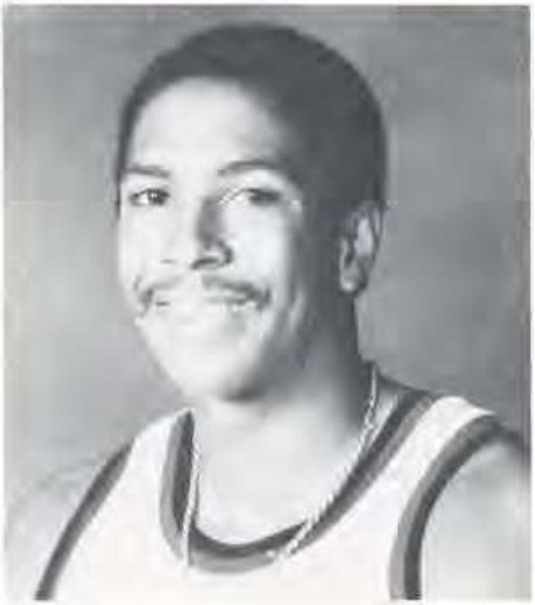
MYCHAL THOMPSON



You go back to the second playoff game of Portland's 1981 mini-series, a game the Trail Blazers won in Kansas City as Mychal Thompson poured in 40 points to keep the Blazers alive.

The 40 points were the most ever scored by a Trail Blazer in the playoffs.

When it was over, Portland Coach Jack Ramsay had this to say of the 6-10 center from Minnesota, No. 1 draft choice in the nation in 1978:

"That was the best game of his career. It couldn't have happened at a better time. He got himself psyched up, and it leads you to wonder what he could do if he was like that every night."

"He can be a tough player and it surfaced tonight," Ramsay added. "He can be one of the best players in the league. He played with more determination and he took the ball to the basket with authority."

Teammate Kelvin Ransey chimed in with, "Mychal can do almost every night what he did tonight if he wants to."

Thompson won All-Rookie team honors in 1978-79 when he averaged 14.7 points and 8.3 rebounds a game, shot a strong .490 from the field and led Portland in blocked shots with 134.

Then he missed the entire 1979-80 season because of a broken left leg suffered in his native Bahamas in late July of 1979.

Would he come back in 1980-81? He did!

He was Portland's second-highest scorer with 17 points a game and in his last 21 contests averaged 21 . . . he led Portland in blocked shots with 170 and finished 8th in the NBA with a 2.15 average . . . he tied Kermit Washington for the team lead in rebounds with 686.

His shooting accuracy climbed from .490 as a rookie to .494, his field goal totals climbed from 460 to 569 and his assists jumped from 176 to 284.

Thompson has proved an especially tough playoff player. In six games with Portland, he has averaged 22.3 points and 9 rebounds and has shot .552 from the floor, including .608 last spring.

The good-natured Thompson has been accused of appearing not to care much on the court. He strongly denies this.

"When I mess up on the court it kills me on the inside," he says. "I may not show it on the outside because it doesn't make any sense to get riled up. That's not going to change things."

"I'm not a volatile person," says Thompson. "I push myself from inside out. I try to keep a stoic face at all times. My friends even tell me I should be more open. But I don't like to do that. I think I'm like my mother in that respect."

Portland General Manager Stu Inman says, "Mychal is 26 going on 19. But there is something about his spirit that you have to love. We see him as a money-in-the-bank player.

KERMIT WASHINGTON

On off days on Trail Blazers' road trips, you can find Kermit Washington, 6-8 power forward, running two miles at a brisk clip.

Why does he run?

"Insecurity," says Washington. "A lot of the drive I get is from the insecurity I have that is with me to this day. There's the feeling that I'm not good enough to do something, so that makes me work extra hard. I want it on my mind that I deserve to do well."

Sorry, Kermit, but the figures during your first two seasons with Portland don't back you up.

In 1979-80, after being obtained from San Diego's Clippers in the Bill Walton compensation, Washington set an all-time Portland record for shooting accuracy with .553 from the floor.

A new record was set last season — by Kermit Washington. This time he hit at a .569 clip and ranked sixth in the National Basketball Association.

Washington led Portland in rebounding in 1979-80 with a career high of 842. Last season he tied with Mychal Thompson for the team lead with 686 and had the best per-game average on the club.

Last season Washington won his second straight berth on the NBA All Defensive second team, tied a career high with 81 steals and averaged 11.4 points a contest.

A 1980 All Star Game performer, Washington was devastating on the boards in Portland's playoff series against Kansas City. In three games, he hauled in 52 rebounds for a 17.1 average that is the best in Portland playoff history. He also shot a solid .522 from the field in averaging 8.7 points a contest.

Washington, a graduate of American University, is refreshing in that he does not claim that professional basketball is all fun.

"No, it's not fun," he says. "I'll be honest with you. Winning is fun. But the preparation that the fans don't see makes it a job."

"If you win, it's fun, but the agonizing moments you have while you're trying to win are nerve wracking," he says. "Losing starts making you question your ability."

Washington last season scored in double figures against 13 of 22 opponents, with high averages of 17 points a game against Milwaukee and 16.8 against Denver.

JEFF LAMP

Number one draft choice of the Portland Trail Blazers in 1981 was Jeff Lamp, 6-6 guard who averaged 18.8 points a game in four seasons with the University of Virginia . . . Lamp was the 15th selection in the first round . . . informed of his selection, Lamp said, "I am really happy about being picked by Portland. For awhile I had heard it might be Indiana. But all along I was hoping for Portland" . . . "I know there will be adjustments from the college to the pro game," said Lamp. "The biggest thing I'll be facing is physically bigger and stronger players. And I will have to learn the Portland system" . . . Lamp's coach at Virginia, Terry Holland, says, "Jeff is a truly fine athlete, the kind of kid whose mental toughness is talked about more than his outstanding athletic abilities" . . . "He'll find a way to get the job done," says Holland. "He's the kind of player who the bigger the game is, the better he plays. He averaged something like 26 points a game against competition from the nation's top 10. He's definitely a money player" . . . Lamp set Virginia career records for field goals (841), for free throw percentage (.849) and for points (2,317) . . . he led the Atlantic Coast Conference in free throw percentage in two seasons and was third in two others . . . in scoring, he finished first, second (as a senior), fifth and seventh in the tough ACC . . . perhaps most important is that Virginia compiled 20-8, 19-10, 24-10 and 29-4 records during Lamp's four seasons . . . this is the best four-year record in the school's basketball history as the Virginia club drew three bids to the NIT and one to the NCAA playoffs . . . Lamp was named to the all-tournament team in 1980 when Virginia won the NIT title . . . Lamp scored 30 points in the semifinal win over Nevada-Las Vegas and hit two clutch free throws in the title victory over Minnesota . . . he was named to the NCAA all-tournament team in the battle of the final four in 1981.

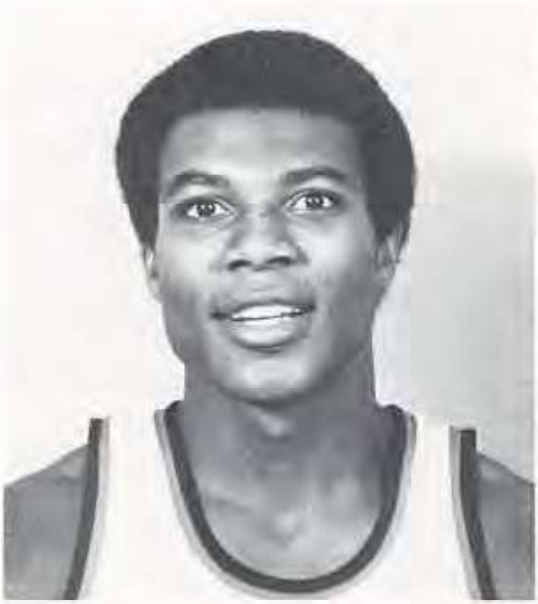
DARNELL VALENTINE



Darnell Valentine, drafted 16th in the first round, was one of the most honored players in Big Eight Conference history . . . the 6-1 guard from Kansas was named all-conference all four seasons and drew All American mention all four years with the Jayhawks . . . he led the Big Eight in steals all four seasons, was first in assists in three of four years . . . he was second behind Clyde Lovellette on Kansas' all-time scoring list with 1821 points for a 15.4 average . . . a member of the 1980 United States Olympic team which compiled a 5-1 record against NBA All-Star teams . . . a three-time Academic All American with a 3.3 grade point average in pre-law . . . "I feel very comfortable playing for the Trail Blazers," he said. "Jack Ramsay is a super coach." "I am looking forward to playing under a coach who will improve my game daily," he added . . . check what some basketball experts said about Valentine . . . "He comes as close to being another Phil Ford as anyone I have ever seen," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith . . . "Darnell Valentine is a one-man fast break," said Southern Methodist Coach Dave Bliss. "He runs it as well as anyone in the country" . . . Boston Celtics General Manager Red Auerbach said of Valentine, "He can play in this league right now. He is going to be a great one" . . . and Kansas Coach Ted Owens said, "He's an extremely complete player and you can't be around a person who works any harder. I don't believe there is a guard in the country I would trade him for" . . . Tony Guy, a teammate at guard last season, said of Valentine, "He makes me look so good. All I have to do is find an open spot and he penetrates and gives me the ball. He makes his teammates a lot better then what they really are."

PETUR GUDMUNDSSON

It would be nice to report that in the third round of the college draft of 1981, the Portland Trail Blazers selected 7-2 center Petur Gudmundsson, a star in his senior season with the University of Washington Huskies . . . sorry, it cannot be done . . . the Blazers did select Gudmundsson but he passed up his senior year with the Huskies, because of some disagreements with the athletic department . . . he played, instead, with the national team in his native Iceland . . . Now Iceland is not exactly a proving ground for future stars in the National Basketball Association . . . but 7-2 centers do not exactly saturate the draft, either . . . Blazer coaches and other officials did some homework and were impressed by the reports on Gudmundsson, even from the University of Washington . . . he was drafted, he survived the cuts at rookie camp and he survived the Los Angeles summer pro league with enough improvement and potential to be invited back to fall camp with Portland . . . at Washington, Gudmundsson saw little action as a freshman . . . he averaged 3.7 points a game, hauled in 61 rebounds and shot .487 from the floor and .733 from the foul line . . . he showed vast improvement as a sophomore, averaging 10.1 points a contest, more than doubling his rebound total to 130 and shooting .525 from the floor and .768 from the foul line . . . in his final season as a junior, Gudmundsson dropped slightly in shooting accuracy to a still impressive .503, dropped in foul shooting to .614 and dropped in scoring average to 6.3 a game . . . but he hauled in a season career high of 157 rebounds . . . in three seasons, his marksmanship from the floor was a strong .511, he was .718 from the free throw line and he averaged 4.3 rebounds and 6.7 points a contest . . . Nothing is certain, but Gudmundsson could prove the surprise of the 1981 college draft.

PETE VERHOEVEN

Peter Verhoeven, 6-9 forward from Fresno State, was selected in the fourth-round of the 1981 college draft by the Portland Trail Blazers . . . Blazer Coach Jack Ramsay, after observing Verhoeven in the Southern California summer pro league, said, "He was a center in college but he's become a potential big forward for us" . . . "He's tenacious," Ramsay added. "No one pushes him around. We want to add as much rebounding potential as possible to our roster, and Pete gets the ball for us" . . . Verhoeven, playing on a Fresno State team that ranked No. 1 defensively in the nation, said, "I stopped everything inside" . . . "Offensively," he said, "I never shot anything except what I got off the boards or when posting up" . . . commenting on his improved shooting in the Southern California league, Verhoeven said, "I worked hard during the off season. I knew I was going to have to play forward. You get an open 15-footer and you have to hit it" . . . Verhoeven saw little playing time as a freshman at Fresno State when he shot .423 from the field and .666 from the foul line, hauled in just 23 rebounds and averaged 1.5 points a game . . . then things began to happen . . . he shot .561 from the floor as a sophomore, .575 as a junior and .568 last season and wound up with an exceptional college career mark of .561 . . . his rebound totals rose steadily from 23 to 79 to 104 to 151 . . . his scoring averages increased from 1.5 points a game to 5.4, 8.2 and 9.1 as a senior . . . and he finished with a career shooting mark at the foul line of .743 . . . Verhoeven was graduated from Hartford High School, about 40 miles south of Fresno . . . he majored in industrial arts . . . he enjoys water skiing . . . and he has taken an interest in and wants to learn how to fly airplanes.

HERB ANDREW

Herb Andrew, a 6-3 guard from University of South Alabama, was a fifth-round draft choice of the Portland Trail Blazers . . . he was selected to return to fall camp because of impressive play in Portland's rookie camp and the Southern California summer pro league . . . in two seasons with South Alabama, Andrew averaged 10.7 points a game, shot a solid .469 from the field and was .743 from the foul line . . . "Herb Andrew just keeps growing on you," said Blazer General Manager Stu Inman. "He's relentless and keeps the pressure on. He's not a great shooter but he does score and plays good defense" . . . "He's a super kid with some defensive potential about him," Inman added. "Herb has emerged with more dimensions to his game" . . . Paul Landreaux, who coached Andrew for two years at Trade Tech Community College in Los Angeles, said, "Herb has never changed. He plays only one way, and that's all out. He can control the ball club for you. It's very difficult to take the ball away from him. And he's a team leader. He gets a team fired up" . . . Andrew, himself, says, "To be honest, I was thinking seriously about not coming to camp. I didn't think my chances were that good" . . . "I never doubted my talent," said Andrew, "but it's not something I counted on. I never made the NBA my top priority. I didn't put all my eggs in one basket" . . . as a junior, Andrew was the hero in all three of South Alabama's one point victories .

JULIUS WAYNE

The college statistics of Julius Wayne, drafted in the seventh round in 1981 by the Portland Trail Blazers, are not impressive . . . in two seasons at Texas-El Paso, Wayne shot just .416 from the floor and .686 from the foul line . . . he averaged 8.2 points a game although this mark climbed to 9.5 as a senior . . . yet Wayne survived the Trail Blazers' rookie camp . . . and he survived the Southern California summer pro league . . . and was selected to report to Portland's fall camp . . . "I was surprised about getting drafted and getting the opportunity to come this far," said Wayne . . . "When I finished playing at Texas-El Paso," he said, "I was hoping to make it to the NBA as a free agent with somebody. But instead, I've been given the chance and I'm really proud" . . . Of his summer league play, Wayne said, "I've been playing pretty good in the league against a lot of tough competition. And it's tough because you practice every day, even on game days" . . . he impressed coaches enough to advance to fall camp . . . Tom Jackson, Wayne's coach at Cantwell High School and Compton Junior College in California, said, "As with any successful athlete, it takes hard work and perseverance, which Wayne has done" . . . "When he left Cantwell and came to Compton to play for me, we talked about his weaknesses and he already knew what they were and he worked very hard on them with a lot of heart all year round" . . . as senior at Compton, Wayne averaged 17 points and 5 assists a game and won Western State Conference All Star honors .

TOM BARKER

Joining the Portland Trail Blazers in fall camp was Tom Barker, 6-11 center-forward from University of Hawaii . . . the rights to Barker, who has played the last two seasons in Holland, were obtained from the New York Knicks . . . in the transaction, New York obtained Portland's third-round draft choice in 1982 . . . and if Barker is still on Portland's roster on December 1, 1981, New York will receive in 1982 a second-round draft choice instead of one in the third round . . . Barker, who is 26, was drafted by the Atlanta Hawks in the fourth round in 1976 . . . As a rookie with the Hawks, he showed strong potential . . . he averaged 8.1 points and 6.8 rebounds a game . . . impressive for a freshman season in the NBA . . . in 1978-79, Barker moved around in the National Basketball Association . . . and he averaged 4.2 points and 3.1 rebounds a game with the Houston Rockets, the Boston Celtics and the New York Knicks . . . then he left the Knicks to play in Europe . . . Portland has been looking for rebounding help . . . it's a long shot, but Barker just might provide it.

HENRY WEINHARD

Henry Weinhard
Brewmaster, No. 1, 5'10", 171 lbs.
Born: 1830, Wurtemburg, Germany
High School: Wurtemburg Area
College: Brewers apprentice

At the age of 22, and after years of apprenticeship, a talented Henry Weinhard decided he was ready for the major leagues. Upon surveying his options, Henry determined the best opportunity for a rookie such as him was in America.

In 1852 he came to the United States and immediately found a berth with the brewers in Cincinati, Ohio. He spent four years with this team polishing his skills.

As a free agent, he was intrigued by reports concerning bright openings on the Pacific coast. So early in 1856 he made the long voyage, via the isthmus, to the far west and hooked up with a Vancouver, Washington organization where he plied his trade for six months.

He then felt the time was right to make his move, so, in 1856, he established his own brewery near Fort Vancouver. It wasn't long before soldiers, loggers and trappers of the area became very big Henry Weinhard fans.

In 1860 he moved his operations to its present location on Burnside in Portland. From then on, Henry chalked up an enviable record of victories. He kept acquiring more equipment and adding more facilities to constantly increase his output while stubbornly maintaining the high level of excellence he had become known for. Everywhere along the coast Weinhard's beer was recognized as unsurpassed by any other native product.

Henry's experience and foresight prompted him to locate in Portland because he realized this area would eventually become the primary source of premium brewing ingredients in the United States. Time has proven him right.

Rare, two-row malting barley, for example, is grown in very few areas of the country, but Oregon's Klamath Basin is the most prominent. And the unique Cascade hops — which Henry recognized as being equal if not superior to the exalted Hallertau hop of Bavaria are raised here in Oregon.

Today, two labels continue in the proud, teutonic tradition set forth by Henry Weinhard 124 years ago. The perennial hometown favorite, Blitz-Weinhard, and the handmade, ultra-premium that is his namesake, Henry Weinhard's Private Reserve.

Trailblazer fans can expect a lot of good things from both of them this season. Again.

Good Morning, Portland!

Kermit and Pat Washington have their wake-up routine "down pat."

"When I get up in the morning," says wife Pat, "I take my Nature Made Vitamins, and the first thing I want to know is, 'When are we going to jog?'" Like a good husband Kermit gropes for his jogging togs and confesses, "Pat usually beats me on those days when she's ready to go and I'm not."

Pat's big on priorities. "Aside from Kermit and the kids," she explains, "right up there on top of my list are Nature Made Vitamins and daily exercise." And Kermit adds, "I never miss a day taking Nature Made Vitamins."

Nature Made is available at Fred Meyer and fine drug stores everywhere. It is, in fact, the #1 selling vitamin in most Portland-area drug stores.

Nature Made®

What a way to start your day!

PORTLAND ATTENDANCE

Portland ended its 1980-81 campaign with its 186th consecutive sellout in regular-season and playoff action in Memorial Coliseum.

The Trail Blazers were sold out for the entire season for the fourth straight time.

Official paid attendance is 12,666, which includes a limit of 300 reserved standing room tickets.

Final regular-season attendance for 1980-81 was 519,306.

Total regular-season attendance for Portland's first 449 games in 11 National Basketball Association seasons was 4,617,888—an average of 10,285 a contest.

On the road last season the Blazers played before 390,910 fans in 41 games—an average of 9,534 a contest.

Closed-circuit telecasts of games at the Paramount Theatre last season drew 57,722 fans for an average of 1,409 a contest.

Average combined attendance at the Coliseum and the Paramount in 1980-81 was 14,075.

If The Cost Of Car Insurance Is Fast Breaking Your Budget, Turn To NATIONWIDE.

Throughout the West folks have learned how to slash their car insurance premium by $50, $60, up to $70 or more a year. They've switched to Nationwide, the world's second largest mutual auto insurer.

People buy direct from Nationwide by phone or mail. This helps lower sales costs and the savings are passed on to Nationwide's customers.

And Nationwide's is a "good-driver" plan. By insuring careful motorists who have fewer accidents, they're able to keep costs down.

Why not find out if you're eligible to save. Call the Nationwide office nearest you for a "no-obligation" rate quote. Call today!!

Time
of the year to tell her again. Or for the first time. Say it with a pendant, ring, bracelet or delicate, glimmerous earrings. Diamonds, a ruby, a setting in gold. From $25.
Valentine's Day is the time.
The place is Kassab Brothers.

Bigger & better from Lawry's.

Lawry's Super Size Taco Shells are 50% bigger than regular shells. And for better tasting taco filling try Lawry's Taco Seasoning Mix. A special blend of seasonings and spices for a taste that's a fiesta, not a siesta.

A cook's best friend. LAWRY'S

When I fix your car, I do something you wouldn't expect.

I back my work in writing.

When you get your car fixed at my Shell Auto Care station, you get a written limited warranty.

It covers all parts and labor for 90 days or 4,000 miles of normal driving, whichever comes first. Any problems, just bring your car and your warranty back. I'll do the work over or refund your money.

So when you need your car repaired, come to my Shell Auto Care station.

You'll get a lot of things you'd never expect.

For worry-free travel, do what the Trail Blazers do.

Go Greyhound.

Greyhound has just been named the Official Motor Coach Carrier for the NBA Portland Trail Blazers. That means Greyhound will be responsible for every detail of their ground transportation during the 1981-82 season.

A pro sports team operates on tight, complicated schedules and requires expert professional service. And your own group, club or organization deserves that same quality service on your next trip, whether you're going to a sporting, church or social event.

Greyhound tops everybody when it comes to comfort, dependability and service. Because we have more experience, more people who are better trained, more expertly maintained equipment and more services. We'll even make hotel and dining reservations for your group.

So if you've got a group, get a Greyhound. Just let us know your group's needs; we'll be there to give you and your group personal attention. Look in the Yellow Pages for your local Greyhound Agent and our toll-free Greyhound Charter Service number. Or see your travel agent.

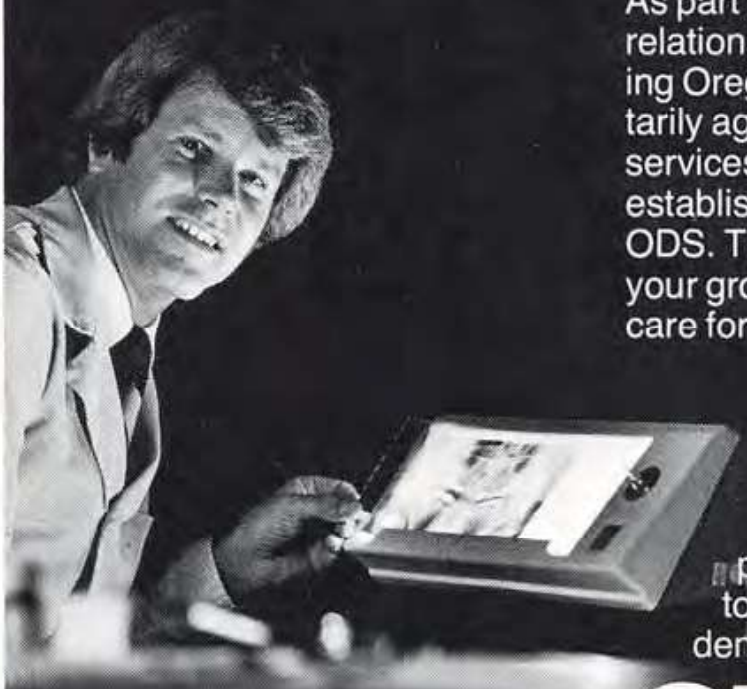
ODS is a dental plan with teeth in it.

Thanks to your dentist.

We've got to hand it to the Dentists in Oregon. Working as partners with ODS, they've been a big factor in establishing a dental plan that's easy for you to administer. Easy to understand. And of great value.



ODS eliminates time-consuming paperwork.
Because of ODS's unique working relationship with 95% of Oregon's Dentists, all paperwork is handled between ODS and the Dentist. That means no more headaches shuttling forms back and forth between Dentist's office, the insurance carrier and the plan administrator.
And what's more, since the patient spends less time unscrambling claims and dispensing forms, there's more time for the real business at hand.

Unique arrangement with 95% of Oregon's dentists provides "excellent value".
As part of the unique working relationship with ODS, participating Oregon Dentists have voluntarily agreed that dental fees for services will not exceed limits established in cooperation with ODS. The net effect being that your group gets more dental care for the dollar.

Save time, Save money, Act now.
If you want to establish a group dental plan or improve upon your present plan, call ODS today. We'll show you a dental plan with teeth in it.

BILL SCHONELY

Broadcasting Portland Trail Blazers' games, home and road, for the 12th straight season is Bill Schonely, an original with the club. Inis first 11 seasons, Schonely missed only two games during regular-season or playoff action. He was suffering from walking pneumonia. He also missed the 1980 pre-season schedule while recovering from a heart attack suffered during the summer in Pendleton in the sagebrush country of eastern Oregon. His recovery was rapid, as befits a former U.S. marine. Schonely made the battle cry of "Rip City" — for a perfect basketball shot — famous in Portland. He came to the Rose City after seven years as sports director of KVI radio in Seattle. He also announced action for the Oakland Seals of the National Hockey League and the Seattle Pilots of the American Baseball League.

DAVE TWARDZIK

Director of Community Relations for the Portland Trail Blazers is veteran player Dave Twardzik, who also will be color commentator on the Trail Blazer radio network and the Paramount Theater. Twardzik missed the entire last season because of back problems. Twardzik, in his first four seasons with Portland, shot .552 from the field, the fifth-best record among active players in the National Basketball Association. Twardzik, a 6-1 guard from Old Dominion, led Portland in assists in his last active season with 273 and averaged 8.5 points a game, just a shade below his career average of 9.5. Twardzik was drafted by Portland in 1972 in the second round but played four seasons with the Virginia Squires of the American Basketball Association before joining the Blazers.

TELEVISION

20 road games will be aired live on KPTV, Channel 12, this year. The televised games are indicated on the schedule below.

JIMMY JONES

For the 12th straight season, Jimmy Jones will handle play-by-play of Portland's 20 road games on KPTV, Channel 12. Jones doubles as public address announcer at the Trail Blazers' home games. A Shrine All Star game performer after his days as an all-city fullback at Portland's Grant High School, Jones also played three seasons at the University of Oregon. He has broadcast professional hockey and baseball and major college football and basketball — mingled in with track and field, boxing, motorcycle racing, golf, bowling, college wrestling and tennis. He is completing his 21st year with KPTV.

LARRY STEELE

Serving as color commentator on road telecasts of Trail Blazers' games for the second straight season is Larry Steele, who played more games (610) for Portland than any other player. Steele, drafted in the third round from Kentucky in 1971, played both guard and forward for the Blazers until suffering a knee injury in Chicago in November of 1979. He never played again. Steele had a career average of 8.2 points a game, shooting .483 from the field and .796 from the foul line. He is the third-highest scorer in Portland history with 4,999 points, is second in assists with 1,719. He also is the all-time leader in personal fouls with 1,832, almost 600 more than any other Blazer, and in disqualifications because of personals with 45, more than twice the total of any other Portland player.

BLAZER SPORTS TALK RADIO SHOW

Starting 90 minutes before each Blazer game is Blazer Sports Talk, hosted by Steve Jones. Blazer Sports Talk is aired on KEX in Portland and 15 other radio stations throughout the state. A Special Edition of Blazer Sports Talk is aired on Saturdays during the season.

STEVE JONES

Broadcasting producer of the Portland Trail Blazers is Steve Jones, former college and professional basketball star, who has been color commentator the past two seasons for Bill Schonely on the Trail Blazer radio network and the Paramount Theater telecasts. Jones, former color commentator on CBS television, was the first Blazer color man to travel with the club. Jones' background is solid. He was a basketball star both at Portland's Franklin High School and at University of Oregon, where he twice was named Most Valuable Player. Jones played eight American Basketball Association seasons with seven different teams, finished his professional career in 1975-76 with the Trail Blazers.

THE PARAMOUNT

The Blazers close circuit telecasts all home games to the Paramount Theater, except those games aired nationally on CBS. This year the Blazers improved their projection system by installing a new $15,000 power light valve, bringing color and picture quality better than ever before.

Advance ticket sales are handled exclusively at all G.I. JOES stores. Tickets on the day of the game may be purchased at the Paramount Theater, 1037 S.W. Broadway from 12 noon to game time. Prices are $6.00 for adults and $5.00 for students through high school. Group tickets, which include a group discount or a free bus to transport the group, are available to purchase. For more information, call the Blazer office, 234-9291.

JIMMY HOLLISTER

For the third straight season, Jimmy Hollister, KEX's talented "morning man," will host the closed circuit telecasts at the Paramount.

THE 1982 COROLLA SPORTS HARDTOP

SPORTIN' LIFE

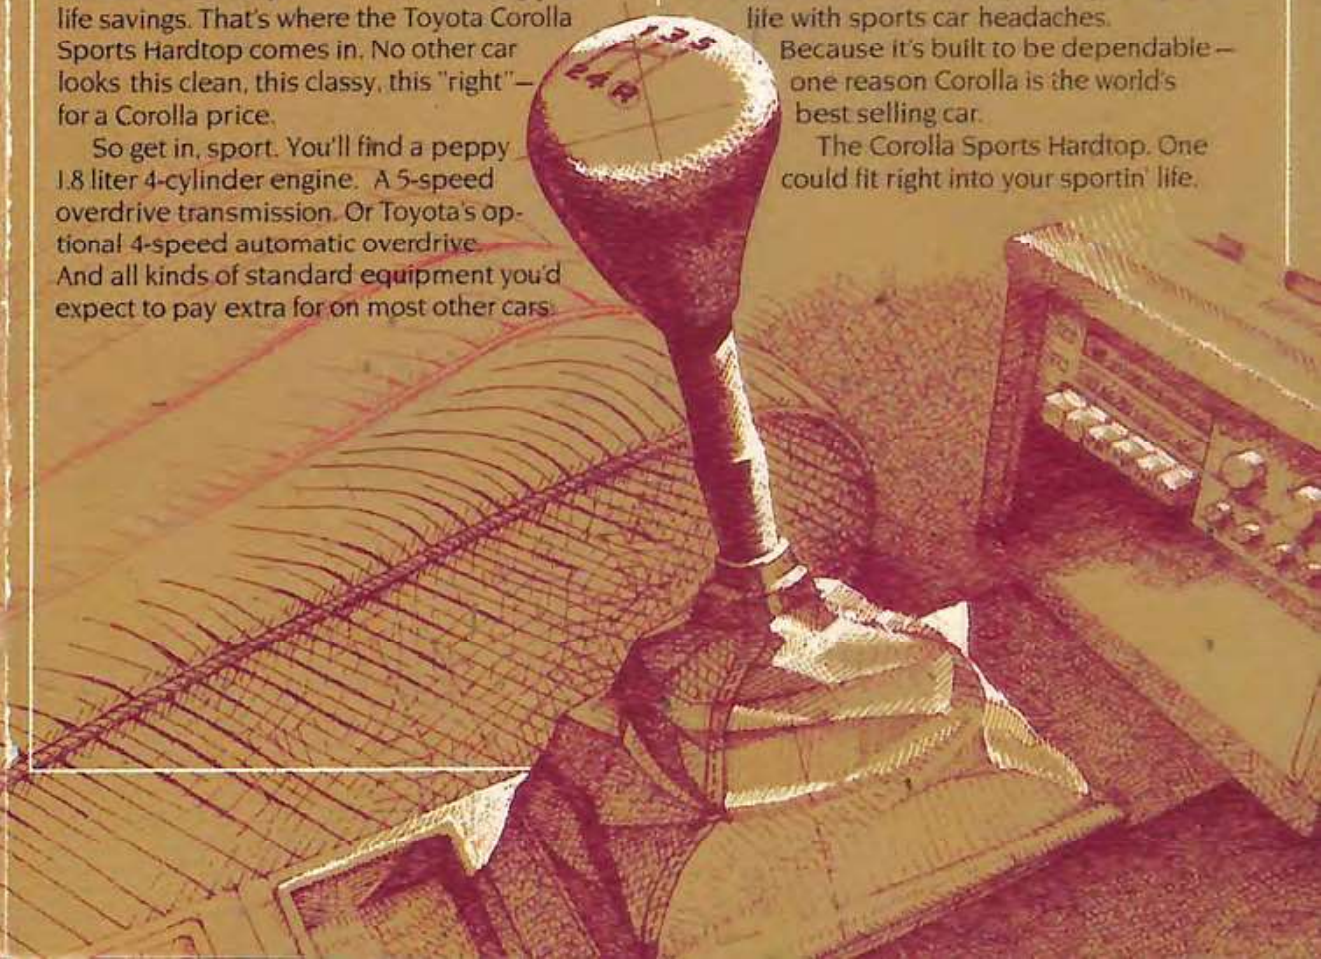
If you want to lead the sportin' life, you need a car that looks the part — without costing your life savings. That's where the Toyota Corolla Sports Hardtop comes in. No other car looks this clean, this classy, this "right" — for a Corolla price.

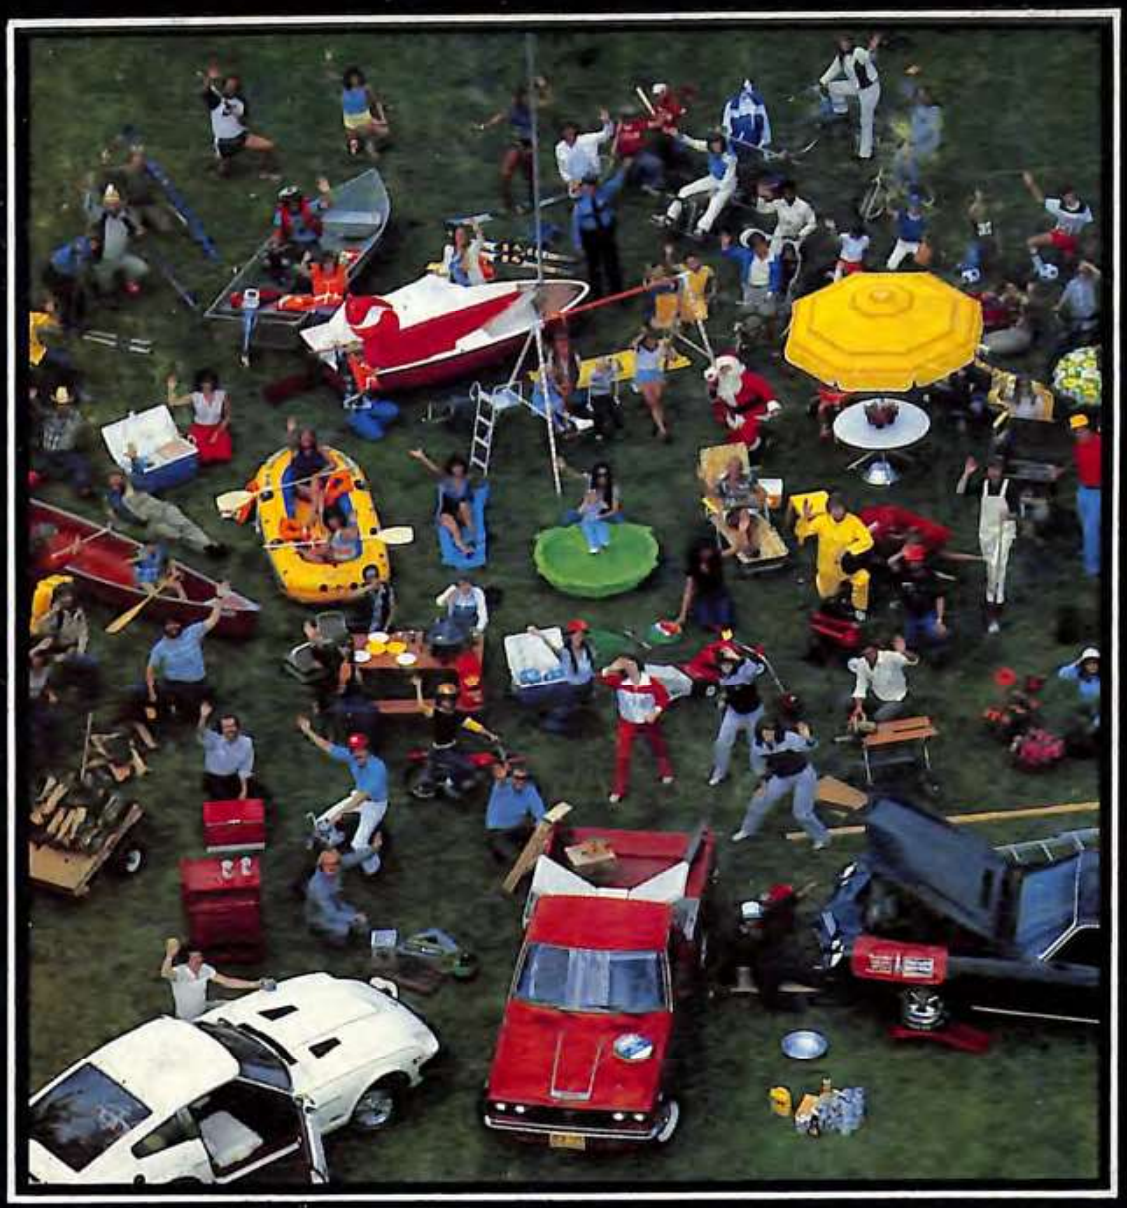
So get in, sport. You'll find a peppy 1.8 liter 4-cylinder engine. A 5-speed overdrive transmission. Or Toyota's optional 4-speed automatic overdrive. And all kinds of standard equipment you'd expect to pay extra for on most other cars. Full instrumentation, including an electric tachometer (very sportin'!). AM/FM/MPX stereo radio. Tinted glass. Steel belted radials.

And one more thing. Toyota's total economy. Here's a car that won't complicate your sportin' life with sports car headaches.

Because it's built to be dependable — one reason Corolla is the world's best selling car.

The Corolla Sports Hardtop. One could fit right into your sportin' life.





We've got what it takes!

We've got the selection, and we've got the price. Great buys on top brands of all the good time gear you need. Sporting goods. Shoes, clothing and equipment for fitness and the great outdoors. Automotive parts and equipment, hardware, power tools, gardening supplies and more. At G.I. Joe's, we're setting the pace. We've got what it takes.
